Re: Your Mediation Practice

Dear Mat:

I have your letter announcing the commencement of your professional life after litigation, as mediation practice and this letter extends my best of success in your new endeavor.

In 32 years of private law practice I have litigated against and worked with some of the finest lawyers throughout the country and a lesser and sometimes much lesser variant of "finest".

Since our first case almost thirty years ago against one another, you have always been one of the most competent, ethical and professional lawyers I have had the pleasure of knowing and working both with and against. The same skills that have impressed me as a litigator will serve you and your new clients well in mediation of any type of matter.

You have always been a quick study on complex fact and legal issues and you have special skill and ability to communicate with lawyers and most importantly parties to litigation with the essence of civility and professionalism, conveying your views, listening and thoughtfully responding.

I believe that you are extremely well suited to be a successful mediator and have the skill set that will result in resolution of cases and in so doing, save litigants' substantial time, expense and importantly, the emotional trauma and travail that is almost always the collateral consequences of litigation.

My very best regards to you and best wishes in your new endeavor.

Very truly yours,
